

At this point, Ann Arbor is about to lose its last commercial radio station to Clear Channel, creating a monopoly in this community. Already this has created problems in emergency response, as no local commercial radio stations knew about the tornado that touched down here on Wednesday, or the subsequent tornado warning. This is not solely a matter of ensuring diverse voices in the media, but of ensuring public safety.